Creativity and Historical Truths

Despite the essential role of print and photojournalism in ferreting out facts and informing the public about significant events, Dartmouth Professor Irene Kacandes argues that it's often memoir, fiction, music and art which best convey the truth and leave indelible impressions.

Northern Forest Canoe Trail: the "Wrong" Way
Peter Macfarlane
Tuesday, October 9 at 7 p.m.

In the spring of 2013, Peter Macfarlane through-paddled the Northern Forest Canoe Trail from the Adirondacks to northern Maine, a distance of some 750 miles in 28 days in a cedar-strip canoe that he designed and built. This spring he ventured out on the Trail for another through-paddle, but this time took on more of a challenge by paddling from Maine to the Adirondacks. He faced nine major upstream rivers and only four downstream, not to mention prevailing headwinds, which were to be a significant player in this trek. On the 10th of June he paddled into Old Forge to become the first recorded person to through-paddle the Trail from east to west.

In this presentation he takes the audience on a trip through his planning, and then the roller coaster ride of overcoming challenges, joyful paddling, loss, exhaustion, despair, and some sublime moments, all illustrated with photos and snippets of video.

Secrets of Mount Philo:
A Guide to the History of Vermont's First State Park

Friday, October 19
at noon
Judy Chaves

The landscape history of Mt. Philo, Vermont's first state park, is the landscape history of Vermont, in miniature. "Sheep fever," the devastating deforestation of the mid-1800s, Vermont's early tourism industry, the early conservation and park movements, reforestation... it's all there on the mountain, if you know where to look. North Ferrisburgh resident (and long-time Mt. Philo hiker), Judy Chaves, has spent 8 years researching the mountain's history and has recently written a guidebook to the park's historic sites. Join her on a "virtual" tour of the mountain and discover, through then-and-now photos, old maps, and even a bit of poetry, what historic gems lie hidden — within plain sight — in the park. Signed copies of the guidebook will be available for purchase.
